Most attention has focused on temporary closings of big US car plants. But the problem is affecting many other sectors, particularly the server systems and PCs used to deliver and consume internet services that became crucial during the pandemic.

Citi flexes SPAC muscles for a record profit under new CEO

JENNY SURANE April 15

CITIGROUP'S EQUITIES DESKS, undersized among Wall Street's giants, are proving strong enough to lift the firm to a record quarterly profit just as a new chief executive officer takes the helm.

Citigroup has raised more than any other bank for special-purpose acquisition companies this year, as managers of the vehicles set out to hunt unspecified takeover targets

The bank also said it will exit retail banking in 13 markets across Asia and Europe, the Middle East and Africa, as part of CEO Jane Fraser's ongoing review of the firm's strategy. Both announcements helped boost Citigroup's stock as much as 3% in early New York trading, before shares pared gains to trade down a touch to $72.64 at 10:06 a.m.

panies this year, as managers of the vehicles set out to hunt unspecified takeover targets. That helped the firm reap $876 million in fees from equity underwriting. Quarterly stock-trading revenue, typically less than $1 billion at Citigroup, surged to $1.48 billion.

It's been a better-than-expected start to the year, Fraser, who took over last month, said in a statement on Thursday. She credited the "strong performance" of the company's Wall Street operations and said the firm is optimistic about its outlook for the economy.

Another bright spot at the start of 2021 was the end to a slide in spending on Citigroup cards, which climbed 1% in the first three months. Still, the world's largest credit-card issuer saw balances on those cards fall 14% as consumers socked away savings and avoided racking up new debt. Banks including JPMorgan have suggested that's evidence that Americans have their finances in order and are ready to spend once vaccinations unleash commerce.
